CLOVER HOLDINGS CONTINUES EXPANSION

Clover Acquires Environmental Reclamation Services (ERS)

CHICAGO, IL (November 15, 2010) – Today, Clover Holdings Inc., the world’s leading provider of vertically integrated, closed-loop environmental solutions, announced the acquisition of Environmental Reclamation Services (ERS). This acquisition advances Clover’s strategy to be the leader in environmental solutions and supports the diversification and growth of its collection programs including laser and inkjet cartridges, cell phones and small electronics.

Founded in 1990, and headquartered in Erie, Pennsylvania, ERS is a global provider of environmental solutions including the recycling and collection of printer supplies and small electronics. The acquisition of ERS represents the continued investment Clover is making in the diversification of its collection programs to meet current market demand and to support its long term growth strategies. The combination of ERS’ collections and recycling business with Clover’s already robust product and services offering further solidifies Clover’s evolution into a vertically integrated solutions provider. ERS will operate independently in the market and will continue to service its customers.

Jim Cerkleski, CEO of Clover Holdings, commented on the acquisition, “We are excited about this acquisition because it advances our diversification and growth strategy. We will continue to expand our collections programs and remanufacturing infrastructure as we diversify into new and emerging markets and drive our ‘recapture, remanufacture, remarket strategy.”

Both companies will continue to operate independently in their respective markets but will work together to leverage potential synergies in the future. This partnership will provide greater coverage and focus to ensure the best and most efficient collection programs are available. The focus will remain on providing best-in-class support to customers while ensuring the highest levels of service in the industry.
